OPENING OF THE NEW PORTS

AT JAPAN.

WE learn by private advices received by the Basilisk, that the ports of Hiogo and Osaka were opened on January 1st, without difficulty; and that the lots of ground are to be sold by auction as soon as possible by the Japanese Government Nearly all the houses are finished; and a sea wall along the Bund is also approaching completion. The trees on the concession are to be left, and not cut down, as was feared. The merchants who have arrived from Yokohama by the Hermann appeared to be more in want of eatables than anything else, and very little business is being done as yet.

Everyone is trying to make himself as much at home as possible. A great many Yakonins are congregated at Osaka and in the vicinity of Hiogo, and every foreigner carries his revolver, but fortunately there has been as yet no occasion

Northing we are aware is likely to meet with a more chilling reception than any proposal to the Hongkong community which has no direct bearing on the "aggregation" of dollars and cents. Propositions respecting libraries, museums, literary societies, debating clubs, anything which in fact appeals to the intellectual sonses, rather than those purely bodily or relating to money-getting, are likely to fall on unheeding ears. Even on questions of policy, which do not directly affect the pocket, it is extremely difficult to arouse a moderate amount of interest.

A protest against the Stamp Act, or Military Contribution, will gain adherents and secure an influential meeting, but anything unconnected with the almighty dollar is but little likely to prosper. At this very moment, in a community which claims, and justly claims in a commercial sense, to be the leading community in China—a community whose intellectual status has with a fine touch of irony, been described by a local contemporary as equal if not superior to any similar community of equal extent outside of Liverpool or Manchester-the endvavor to carry on a society which one would insgine it would have been the boast of the colony to support has long since fallen to the ground from the intellectual poverty of the place, and there is not a single open port in China which in proportion to its residents does not boast a higher average of literary interest, and influence than Hongkong. Even the much bechaffed Chefoo, where the society was some time since described as a Consul, a merchant, an auctioneer, and two tidewniters, produces evidence of individual literary effort which should call a blush to the cheek of Hongkong residents. We do not of course allude to those who make literature & profession, or to the labours of a Legge or of a Davis, but those from whom by education and position an intelligent interest in literary and scientific matters may be fairly expected; and despite the "soft times past to the mercantile community, we must confess our belief that there are engrossing a pursuit. Something of this is doubtless due to the prevailing habit of to military or naval men-but as a mero parliest opportunity. But we do not think that this is sufficient to account in all respects for the indifference to which we allude. There is something fatal in Hongkong air to intellectual pursuits off the part of the mass, and it arises chiefly from the fact that a marked distinction has been preserved between the moneyed class, who have had but little time for literature, and the more literary residents of the colony whose means are seldom on so plentifully administered in for their use.

SUPREME COURT.

IN BANKRUPTCY. Before the Hon, the CHIEF JUSTICE HONGKONG & SHANGHAL BANK v. DENT & Co.-PETITION TO ANNUL BANKRI PTOY. The Acting Attorney General appeared on behalf of the Bank, instructed by M Hazeland; and Mr Whyte, instructed by

Mr Gaskell, appeared for Dent & Co. Mr Ball opened his case by remark that he meant to rely upon the points law involved in the case, more than upon any statement of facts. The Court was aware that, on a petition filed by Mr Gomez a creditor of Messra Dent & Co., adjudication was given to that firm as bankrupts that as a judgment creditor, the Hongkong Banking Corporation had effected a seizure, but not a sale: and that ultimately an order to release the property had been carried out by the Corporation, as the Bankruptcy had been completed. As to the law of the question, the Attorney General contended that no act of bankruptcy had been committed sufficient to support a valid adjudication. Under Sect. 10 of the local Ordinance, which was based upon the law of England, certain rules were laid down as to what constituted an act of bankruptcy. He would refer to the affidavits, in which two acts of bankruptcy were named as having been committed-viz. beginning to keep house with intent to delay creditors, and having paid a creditor in full. In laying down the principles of law, the Attorney General began by saying that, in the case of a firm of more than one partner, each partner must commit an act of bankruptcy before an adjudication could be obtained; that is to say, that no one can make a partner bankrupt until that partner has committed an act of bankruptoy; and this principle holds even in cases where only one partner is resident and transacting business. In support of those dicts, the learned counsel produced numerous cases in which the principles were carried into practice; and then he referred to the law as to principal and agent, and as to the limitation of power of partnership. The Attorney General proceeded to read copies of the affidavita upon which the adjudication had been given ; when

The Chief Justice asked if he meant put their in, because if so, he would require to put in the whole of the proceedings in the bankruptcy, which was the property of he Official Assignee

The Attorney General said that were in Court, and he did not think there was any necessity to put them all in. would be a monstrous doctrine to uphold that any officer of the Court could withhold documents which were actually in Court. If everything were put in the adjudication would also go in ; and his Lordship surely would not bind him to put in what put him

His Lordship said, certainly not, and suggested that the proceedings should be put in so that both parties could select whatever they wished as evidence.

Mr Whyte objected to this, as the petitioners had no right to prop up and supple ment their case from documents in Cour This objection was noted; and the A. G. consented to the proceedings being produc ed. Mr Whyte, however, here asked leave to make a few preliminary objections which 11th month, Li-Hung-chang reports his he had waived previously. The petition, he said, was improperly entitled, had no (says the Daily News) is as follows := Ou | been signed, attested, or sworn to by affithe 7th of the 11th month, there were davit. In it, also, there was no allegation that the petitioners were judgment credi which the rebels were worsted, and retreat tors. Besides, no petition can be made before the Official Assignee be appointed and finally, that, as the Court derived its power from Sec. 4 of the Bankruptcy Ordinance, and as no power was there given for a creditor obtaining annulment of bankruptey, the Court had no jurisdiction the case; a bankrupt could petition rounded, and many of the houses they were annul a bankruptcy, but a creditor could not. The learned counsel said that tered in a body and prepared to give battle. | was the law in this Colony: he did not suppose there was any one there responsible for it; but under it he maintained that the petition was informal and defective, and ought to be dismissed. The Attorney General said there were only one or two of the objections advanced by his learned friend which were worthy o a reply. He was sure that his Lordship would take into account the special circumstances of this case, as regards the objection that no allegation by petitioners that they were judgment creditors had been made in the petition; everybody knew what they were; and it would be a denial of justice to rely upon an objection so trivial. As to the petition being pre mature, it was very advisable in this Colon to avoid the frightful expense accruing in any cause of only a few days' standing. As to anthority, he would say that their case of the Colorado, gives the opinion about rested upon the ground that the Court had no authority to grant the order at all, and surely he had power to reconsider an inadvertence, and thus give redress to the petitioners. The learned counsel then contended that the affidavits were insufficient

The Japanese were regularly shipped before the American Consul, Mr Rice, and stipulation was made by Captain Childs to return them to Hakodati when he touches there on his next cruise north. Subsequently two other Japanese were shipped on the Oregon, Capt. Mammen, and two on the Julian, Capt. Lubbers, by the Government. These latter four were shipped before the Prussian Conaul, who undertook to have them returned to their own country when discharged at Honolulu. They accordingly are now in charge of the Prussian Consul, F. A. Schaefer, Esq., who will provide them with a passage home. All the expense will be borne by the Japanese Government. Each one has a stamp with which he vouches for the correctness of all bills paid for him. These Japanese whalemen appear to be men of some consideration at home, being there attached to the Custom House, and in employ of the Government. They receive no wages from the ships, but are sent to learn whaling, so that whalers may be fitted out from Japan. They have proved themselves willing and quiet pupils, taking their share of ship work, and going in the boats, and adopting the dress and fare of the crew. When a month out, Capt. Childs fell in with the Adeline, and his Japanese sent their journal (wich they have kept strictly through the voyage) and letters back to their friends. Their report must have been favorable, as the Captain of the Adelina could have engaged a full list of Japanese sailors had he wished them. Since coming ou shore, the Japanese have donned their own dress and are boarding at the Sailors' Home. Some of them are entitled to wear two swords, which they are particular to and informing themselves of how matters are done here. The Japanese have long been see uded from the outside world. but having admitted intercourse with foreigners show that, unlike their Chinese neighbors. they are ready to learn and adopt new ideas, and to keep up with the times.

> > A BRAVE FELLOW. - The Evening Bul letin (San Francisco) narrates an act of courage that deserves extended notice. Some races were going on Almeda Agricultural fair. Between the second and third heats the shadow of a great calamity swept over the laughing crowd and blanched the face of every one. There were about 100 family vehicles, all filled with women and children, on the ground, of which all but about 20 had horses attached to them. Some 40 of them were stationed on the east side of the Judges' stand, in the inner enclosure, and the remainder on the west. A cry of alarm from some one drew the attention of all to a pair of horses, without a driver, charging across the enclosure at full speed for the buggies in which the women were. A couple of animals, mad with terfor and excitement, charging upon 150 or 200 helpless creatures, and hardly a man near enough to prevent those carriages that were not shattered by the shock of the first collision being carried off in the general stampede of all the horses on the ground which seemed so imminent, was enough to appal the stoutest heart. "Head them off!" shouted the Judges; "Head them off!" Easier said than done, at the headlong speed they were going, and there were few near enough to attempt it. One brave man, one of the Uncle Sam's discharged soldiers. heard the cry, comprehended the danger, and determined to offer his life once more in what seemed a forlorn hope. He rode for them, in hopes of turning the runaways. but they were past seeing or fearing anything, and bore him down as a troop of cavalry might have done a single opponent. Over went horse and man, but when down they effected their object. "Good God he is killed!" was the ory; but to the relian of all, as the dust subsided, and showed the wreck of a buggy and three horses struggling on the ground, the man was seen
